

The New York Times

© 2010 The New York Times

NEW YORK, SUNDAY, DECEMBER 12, 2010

The Moment

BIRCH BOOKS

Speaking Volumes

FOR those on your list who like to linger in the 20th century, to wallow in the cultural riptides of a predigital age, the holiday catalog for Birch Books (birchbooks.com) is manna from heaven. Choose from their well-priced first editions of still glossy coffee-table books, with titles like “Picasso’s Picassos” (1961) and Julian Schnabel’s “CVJ:

Nicknames of Maitre d’s and Other Excerpts from Life” (1987). The pages from Robert Mapplethorpe’s “Certain People: A Book of Portraits” (1985), above, demonstrate what the photographer meant when he said, “I’m not interested in those plain . . . people.” Information: (212) 787-2844.

ANDY PORT

To see the article on nytimes.com Click Here